Learning outcomes, including any relevant competencies listed in the Minnesota Transfer Curriculum:
Students will be able to
• employ the methods and data that historians and social and behavioral scientists use to investigate the human condition.
• examine social institutions and processes across a range of historical periods and cultures.
• use and critique alternative explanatory systems or theories.
• develop and communicate alternative explanations or solutions for contemporary social issues.

The student will learn the manner in which individuals relate to others and others relate to the individual. It is planned that small group experiences will aid the individual to further his/her self-understanding; how one’s values, standards, and behavior are intervened with the group to which he/she belongs; to further understand by understanding group associations that form the building blocks of society. Finally, the purpose is to learn how friendship networks develop, how group leaders come to be selected, how communication is structured, how power is exercised, and how social pressures are exerted to control group members.
